Energy problems critical

(c) New York Times

Washington — President Carter warned Monday that the nation's energy problems remain critical despite some moderation of the weather and the reopening of schools and factories in some parts of the country.

"The situation is still serious and the American people should not be lulled into a false sense of security," he said, according to his press secretary, Jody Powell.

Fish were just drunk

Belgrade, Yugoslavia (AP) — Thousands of fish thought poisoned by industrial waste have suddenly recovered. They were just drunk, a Belgrade newspaper said Monday. Experts said that after the Podgorica alcoholic beverage plant released a quantity of brandy into the Jadar River, many fish floated on the surface with strange, unfish-like looks and without actually reaching the belly-up stage.

What's calm and cool?

San Francisco (AP) — Amid the cackling, crowing, and clucking, the calm, contented chicken was cool as a crispy cucumber.

Gary Wilson of Cloverdale, surrounded by the din and the fragrance that usually accompanies 2,000 chickens, quietly stood by his dark Brahma rooster. The rooster, likewise, quietly stood by his master.

The other barnyard fowl were not quite so calm and relaxed. They were loud, noisy, and just plain boisterous.

GM makes recovery

Detroit (AP) — General Motors Corp., completing a sensational recovery from a two-year recession, Monday reported record net profits of $2.9 billion in 1976, more than double its depressed earnings in 1975.

The world's largest automaker also reported record sales of $47.2 billion, up 32% from the previous high of $35.8 billion in 1973 and the $35.7 billion reported for 1975.

Burglar claims escapes aided

By Jim Camden and Deb Gray
Star Staff Writers

On Sept. 19 and again on Dec. 24 of last year, Steven Van Ackeren escaped from the Nebraska Penal Complex. Both times he was captured and returned.

That seems a simple enough story, but Van Ackeren — a convicted burglar — claims the Federal Bureau of Investigation helped him escape the first time, and the Nebraska State Patrol helped him escape the second.

Capt. Lynn Parks, in charge of the investigation for the State Patrol, said Van Ackeren's story is a fabrication. The FBI agent and the patrol investigator whom Van Ackeren said arranged his escapes refused to comment on the story. His ex-wife said she has letters from him in which he indicates he was let out by law enforcement agencies. His former girlfriend said she contacted the FBI for Van Ackeren, but thought the FBI wasn't interested.

In telephone interviews with The Star, Van Ackeren said FBI agent Peter Wyman of Omaha arranged the first escape to help obtain convictions against suspected criminals in Omaha.

Van Ackeren said that on Sept. 19, when he was an inmate in the trusty dorm, he went out through a gate he had been told would be unlocked and climbed a fence near a tower he had been told would be unmanned. Warden Robert F. Parratt refused to comment Monday on whether or not anyone was in the tower on Sept. 19, saying the escapes were under investigation.

Van Ackeren said that after he escaped, a 1973 Nova with a driver he didn't know was waiting for him. He was taken to his former girlfriend's house in Omaha, he said.

Van Ackeren's former girlfriend told The Star that she was completely surprised when he arrived to her house. She said she told him he couldn't stay, so she and Van Ackeren left.

She said her father saw the pair driving away from the house and called the Omaha Police Department.

When police stopped him in Council Bluffs, Van Ackeren stabbed himself. He was taken to a hospital. At the hospital he jumped through a window in another escape attempt, but was caught six hours later.

Van Ackeren said that when he was returned to the penitentiary, he was approached within the next week by Ron Osborn of the State Patrol. Osborn, Van Ackeren said, wanted to make the same deal as FBI agent Wyman: get the convicted burglar out of jail to work undercover to convict Omaha crime figures.

Van Ackeren had been charged with escape after the Sept. 19 incident, the Lancaster County attorney's office later added the charge of habitual criminal. Van Ackeren told The Star that Osborn said the charges would be dropped if he cooperated, and that he would be allowed to enter the prison's educational release program.

According to Van Ackeren, on Dec. 24 he found a guard's uniform, a rubber nose, glasses and makeup in a restroom near the visiting area. A penitentiary guard had told him where to find the disguise, he said.

Van Ackeren said that after a visit from relatives, he shaved off his mustache, put on the false nose and glasses and walked out of the prison wearing the guard uniform.

He said that again a car was waiting, and again, he didn't know the driver. He was taken to an Omaha address he said he found on a paper left with the guard uniform.

When he didn't hear from Osborn for several days, Van Ackeren said he considered leaving town. But on Dec. 29 the Omaha police found him hiding under a bed in the house. He was taken back to Douglas County jail.

Both patrol investigator Osborn and FBI agent Wyman have refused to comment on Van Ackeren's story.

I can't comment on that, it's under investigation, Wyman said.

I don't have any comment on that one way or the other. It's still being investigated," Osborn said.

Patrol Capt. Parks told The Star that Van Ackeren made up the whole story. There was no truth to it, he said.

"We've got three people charged in that (second) escape," Parks noted, saying that the patrol believes Van Ackeren's sister and two brothers, who visited him on Dec. 24, helped him get out in the crowd of holiday visitors. The three were charged in January in Lancaster County Court with aiding Van Ackeren's escape.

Parks said that the case will be tried in about a month.

We'll let him (Van Ackeren) tell his story, and we'll tell our story and let the jury decide, he said.

Parks also denied that a deal was ever made with the county attorney's office to drop charges on Van Ackeren's first escape.

But Warden Parratt told The Star that on Jan. 28, Parks told him that such a deal was made with the Lancaster County attorney's office. Parks acknowledged the deal after Parratt specifically asked about it in connection with an investigation Parratt said.

EOC head says budget still short

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

The director of the Nebraska Equal Opportunity Commission Monday told the Legislature's Appropriations Committee that he has found it "useless" to ask for an adequate budget for his agency.

"No one seems to want to appropriate that kind of money to the commission charged with investigating alleged discrimination in housing, employment and public accommodations," Lawrence Myers said.

"If we were to ask for a realistic budget which would allow us to reduce our backlog (of cases) over the next two years, you'd laugh us out of the room."

The commission is requesting a 36% hike in state funding for fiscal 1977-78 to a level nearly $390,000.

But Myers said another $350,000 would be needed to eliminate the backlog of cases which have accumulated over the past years.

The commission now has about 1,000 cases pending, some of them stretching back 2½ years, he said.

Even with the requested increase in funding, the backlog will grow, Myers said.

It takes 12 to 15 months to process the average case, and some 371 cases were filed in the first half of fiscal 1976-77 alone.

"We're just trying to keep our head above water," he noted.

"I've talked to people who have filed, and waited, and finally given up," Sen. Steve Fowler of Lincoln told Myers.

"They are losing faith in the law when their cases are not acted on. We have to address the backlog sometime, don't we?"

Myers said he has tried in the past, but adequate funding was not forthcoming.

The 1977-78 request would fund six additional employees from state money, three of whom were funded this fiscal year with federal cash.

Commissioner Richard Vinal of Omaha told the committee that the agency lacks the resources to chop away at the backlog of cases and to properly train field investigators.

"If we gave you an accurate budget we would need to clear away the backlog in two years, you'd think we were pulling your leg," he said. "So we're just trying to keep afloat."

Myers said about 50% of the complaints are based on race, 40% on sex and 10% on age discrimination. Forty-eight per cent of the claimants are white.

In other action, the committee heard three other agency budget requests and a bill which would authorize payment of expense reimbursements to members of the Commission on the Status of Women and the State Personnel Board.

Although funds have been budgeted for such payment, the committee was told, no such authorization has yet been included by law.

The bill, LB365, was held for later action.

Experts recommend lifting moratorium on flu shots

Washington (AP) — A panel of experts summoned to Washington because of an outbreak of A-Victoria flu in Florida recommended Monday that the nationwide moratorium on flu vaccinations be lifted immediately.

The nation has 27 million doses of A-Victoria vaccine on hand — all already mixed with swine flu vaccine. The swine flu vaccine has been linked with an increased threat of Guillain-Barre syndrome, a rare but occasionally fatal form of paralysis.

The 20 medical experts and scientists made their recommendation to Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. after an all day meeting.

Califano, who sat in on the final two hours of the panel's deliberations, said he hoped to make a decision Tuesday about lifting the moratorium.

The experts did not write down their recommendations or vote on a course of action. However, there was consensus on these points:

— The moratorium should be lifted on the combined vaccine with the committee recommending that the elderly and those with chronic diseases get shots. Particular attention should be given to those in institutions.

— The combined vaccine should be made available without recommendation to anyone in the population. This would permit people who want the shots to get them.

— The moratorium on the vaccine for Hong Kong flu, a less severe strain that primarily infects children and young adults, should be lifted, returning it to its previous status of being available from private doctors. This moratorium was placed as a precaution after swine flu was linked with the paralysis.

— No decision will be made at present on whether the moratorium on the pure strains of swine flu vaccine should be lifted.

If Califano adopts the recommendations, it will be up to state and local health officials to decide whether they want to resume mass immunization programs in their areas or simply make the combined vaccine available on demand.

The national flu immunization program was suspended in December when an apparent statistical link was discovered between flu vaccinations and the rare paralytic illness.

The flu program concentrated on immunizing people against A New Jersey influenza, more commonly known as swine flu, but the elderly and those suffering from chronic diseases were given shots that contained both swine and A-Victoria vaccines.

Frigid weather can cause colds by driving people to hole up

New York (AP) — The uncommonly cold weather isn't likely to cause an increase in the number of common colds, his winter — unless people stay indoors more than usual.

Cold weather doesn't cause colds. Viruses do, and the brutal weather may drive people inside where they are more likely to breathe air carrying them. Outdoors, the air is likely to be clearer.

If there are no viruses around, you could stand in cold water or in a draft for hours without catching a cold.

Definitive research on the subject comes from a team of doctors at the Baylor University School of Medicine. They showed that keeping warm and dry doesn't avoid colds — and getting chilled and damp doesn't do any harm.

The researchers reported in the The New England Journal of Medicine some years ago on their work with 47 volunteers. They used a chilly room, cold baths and some known cold viruses.

The chilly room and cold water had no effect on either the frequency of colds or their duration and severity.

The finding that chilling does not cause colds is supported by reports from four brewing companies. They said workers who spend time in cellars where temperatures range from 32 to 47 degrees catch fewer colds than other employees.

Home seems to be the chief place for spreading colds, said another study, that examined entire families. It showed children get more colds than adults, and boys are more susceptible than girls.

Young adults, women catch more colds than men, the study showed.

Developing a drug to combat the common cold is difficult because there are maybe 100 or more different viruses that cause colds. Antibiotics do not affect viruses.

Catching a cold doesn't seem to produce immunity against another cold for very long, perhaps because of the large number of cold viruses or maybe because the viruses may not be very effective in stimulating immunity.

One reason why people get colds in the fall is that central heating is turned on at that time, said a Public Affairs Committee study.

The heat dries up the moisture in the air, and this lack of moisture causes the nose and the respiratory system are affected, and the susceptibility to infection increases.

Adm. Turner named CIA head

(c) New York Times
Washington — President Carter nominated Monday Adm. Stansfield Turner, who has made his reputation as a military analyst, to be director of central intelligence.

Turner, 53, who is commander of Allied Forces Southern Europe with headquarters in Naples, spent part of his career in weapons systems analysis and, thus, in study of strategic deterrence. Carter and Turner were classmates at the U.S. Naval Academy, Turner graduating 25th in the class and Carter 59th.

However, the President told his Cabinet Monday that "I never knew him" at Annapolis. Carter added that Turner "was so far ahead of us in accomplishments as a midshipman that we never considered him a competitor or even a peer."

Carter, in an extraordinarily warm burst of praise, said of the admiral, "I have never known a better military person," adding that he was someone who "in the future could be the next George Marshall," a reference to the greatly respected Army chief of staff in World War II who went on to serve as secretary of state and of defense.

Several sources on Capitol Hill said the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, which will pass on the nomination before the full Senate votes on confirmation, would probably take its time, partly because Turner's views are little known among senators. However, there was no initial indication that the nomination would run into the kind of serious opposition that scuttled Carter's original selection of former Nebraskan Theodore C. Sorensen to head the CIA.

Sorensen's nomination ran into trouble partly because some senators thought his liberal, intellectual background would tend to "isolate" him in the agency. Carter has apparently fallen back on a military choice which may be more popular with conservative senators.

In his role as director of central intelligence,

Turner will also coordinate intelligence reaching the President from other agencies. If confirmed, he will be the 10th CIA director since the agency was created in 1947 and the fourth who has been a military officer. By law, his deputy director will have to be a civilian.

An article by Turner called "The Naval Balance: Not Just a Numbers Game" in the January issue of the quarterly, Foreign Affairs, will probably be widely read in Washington in the next few days.

In the article, he suggests that a meaningful comparison of U.S. and Soviet naval power can best be made, not by counting ships and planes, but by assessing to what degree the American force remains capable of carrying out its major missions.

In the article, Turner says the ability to influence third powers by American naval "presence" can be diluted by overstated warnings of the Soviet threat and calls for "exercising care in our public discussions."

Strip mining bill's effect said minimal

Washington (AP) — Strip mining legislation twice vetoed by former President Ford and now back before Congress would have little effect on either coal production or unemployment, according to a new government study.

Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus told a Senate subcommittee Monday that he favors extending the proposed coal strip mining standards to cover other minerals.

But, while Andrus and several members of a Senate Interior subcommittee were in general agreement on extending the standards, the emphasis at the subcommittee hearing was on swift passage of the basic coal strip mining control legislation.

President Carter has said he would sign the bill and support now seems so widespread that some senators want to attach their own pet projects to a bill certain to pass.

The study by the Environmental Protection Agency and the Council on Environmental Quality disputes claims by Ford administration officials that the measure was so restrictive it would throw tens of thousands of miners out of work and hamper the nation's drive for energy self-sufficiency.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston Jr., D-La., said Monday he thinks legislation opening the way to coal-carrying pipelines should be included in the strip-mining bill.

Subcommittee chairman Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., replied that he would resist attempts to add anything to the basic package.

Metcalf said his subcommittee would seek to expand the controls, once they are signed into law, to apply to reclaiming all manner of abandoned open-pit operations, from copper pits to marble quarries.

When Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, asked Andrus if he would work for expanding the bill the secretary replied: "Yes, sir, I will."

Bundled-up workers return to chilly factories

Associated Press
Bundled up against the cold, workers returned to chilly factories Monday as natural gas started flowing to some of the eastern and midwestern industries closed when frigid weather strained energy supplies to the breaking point.

Authorities in many areas warned, however, that the plants could be shut down again if the weather takes a turn for the worse.

Below-freezing temperatures gripped much of the eastern half of the country Monday, but there were predictions of improvement later in the week.

Those businesses that were open operated at lower-than-usual temperatures. In Virginia, for example, schools and businesses were required to keep thermostats at 65 or less during operating hours. Nearly all workers wore sweaters or other heavy clothing.

"This old place is cold and drafty," said an aide in the governor's office.

Consumers, meanwhile, continued to find that the cold had put a crimp in supplies of fresh fruits and vegetables, driving up prices. Citrus fruits and other crops from Florida were destroyed by the cold weather, food shipments from other parts of the country piled up in midwestern depots when delivery trucks were stalled by snow.

The week's beginning brought back-to-work orders for hundreds of thousands of laid-off employees, but many factories faced longer shutdowns because of still-short natural gas supplies.

General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. said some 39,000 auto workers were still idle on Monday because of parts or energy shortages at 20 plants.

In Buffalo, N.Y., stores, offices and factories slowly started reopening as the city continued to dig out after a Jan. 28 blizzard. The ban on nonessential traffic remained in effect, however, and schools were not scheduled to open until Wednesday.

National Weather Service forecasters predicted that the temperature in Buffalo might rise above freezing on Thursday for the first time in more than 1½ months.

Wisconsin officials also were hopeful that the worst of the cold is over. Rolland Wendick, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service, said that temperatures in Milwaukee were expected to be near or above normal on Tuesday.

"I think we've bottomed out on this cold weather," Wendick said.

For many areas, the big problem remaining was snow removal.

"It's become a public hazard," said Louis Tullio, mayor of Erie, Pa., where 103 inches of snow has fallen this winter. Tullio estimated that 40 per cent of the city's streets were impassable because of snow and water line breaks caused by the cold.

"We're going to pull cars aside to plow the streets if we have to," he said.

500 families in one town out of water for weeks

Pineville, W. Va. (AP) — June Fletcher is a student at Marshall University, a school closed last week because of the natural gas shortage. And she says she just can't wait to get back to school, not because of an unquenchable thirst for knowledge.

She wants water — like in a warm shower.

Like 500 other families in this southern West Virginia community, the Fletcher residence has been without water for nearly a month.

"It's really not funny," said Miss Fletcher, who lives with her parents, John and Etta Fletcher. "We've had to carry pails of water from the neighbors. And we impose upon them occasionally for a shower."

The problem is that the city's water system has frozen solid in dozens of places. Water mains have burst repeatedly and nearly half the 1,100 homes hooked onto the system have been without water since early in January.

Pineville, like the rest of the state, has endured the worst winter in decades, with record low temperatures and snow. Another record low was reported Monday.

The National Weather Service said the closest reporting station, at nearby Beckley, recorded a low of 4 degrees below zero, the coldest ever for the date. The previous record was 5 above in 1966.

"We've had no water for a month," Ray Edwards said Monday. "I haven't had a bath since last week."

Take my neighbors, for instance," he said. "This is bad for me and my wife but it's been terrible for my next door neighbors. They use steam heat and they haven't been able to get any water for their radiators. Their house is as cold as ice."

More than 1 million laid off

Washington (AP) — Between 12 million and 157 million persons — most of them in Ohio and New York — have been laid off their jobs because of the natural gas shortage, new federal and state reports indicate.

A report given White House energy adviser James R. Schlesinger over the weekend shows gas-shortage unemployment in at least 17 states, ranging from about 1,000 each in Mississippi and Wisconsin to an estimated 250,000 in New York and 550,000 to 1 million in Ohio. The report is based on estimates prepared by the Commerce Department and by state agencies.

Rhodesian guerrillas execute 7 white missionaries

Salisbury, Rhodesia (AP) — Seven white Roman Catholic missionaries, including four nuns, were lined up and shot in a guerrilla attack that stunned Christian church groups in Rhodesia and brought an expression of "profound grief" from Pope Paul VI.

Officials said it was the worst group killing of whites in four years of war by black guerrillas against Rhodesia's white government.

The one survivor of the shooting said three German Dominican nuns, one English Dominican nun, two Jesuit missionaries from Britain and a lay brother from Ireland were executed inside the compound of their mission school north of Salisbury Sunday night by guerrillas who argued about who would do the shooting.

"They did not say one word about why they were doing this to us," said Father Dunstan Myerscough, an English Jesuit who said he threw himself to the ground when the guerrillas opened fire. "When one of the sisters asked what they wanted, one of them said, 'We want our country.'"

Rhodesian police said they collected 111 empty cartridges from Soviet-made machine guns at the shooting scene, the Catholic Masumi mission in lush, hilly country 36 miles northeast of the Rhodesian capital.

A telegram sent by the Vatican to black Archbishop Patrick Chakaipa of Salisbury said Pope Paul "prays for peace and justice to be re-established in all regions afflicted by these atrocious crimes."

Archbishop Chakaipa called the guerrilla attack an "evil act" which made a "mockery of whatever good ideals they claim to serve."

Father Myerscough said 12 guerrillas gathered him and the seven others on a sandy road running through the mission compound, then seemed to argue about who should kill them.

"One came forward and then withdrew. Then another did the same. Eventually three came forward and the others ran off. They raised their guns and opened fire."

Another white nun, 74, had been ordered out of her room but fell when a guerrilla pushed her through the door. She said he left her behind after she told him she had arthritis and could not move quickly. "Later I heard the shooting," she said.

Father Myerscough said the intruders ignored black nuns and staff members at the mission.

"They just seemed interested in rounding up the Europeans," he said.

John Potter, police superintendent for the area, contended the attackers were members of the outlawed Zimbabwe African National Union, a black nationalist movement "under the alleged control of Robert Mugabe."

Mugabe is a black nationalist leader with whom Prime Minister Ian Smith has refused to negotiate a transition to black majority government in Rhodesia. Smith contends Mugabe has Soviet backing.

Potter said he doubted the guerrillas had been ordered to kill the missionaries.

"They seem to do their own thing," he said. "If they want to burn down villages, that is what they will do."

Twelve missionaries have been killed in Rhodesia in the last two months, including three German Catholics shot by a black gunman 190 miles south of Salisbury in December. Later that month, a Methodist minister and his wife were killed by government forces who said they had accidentally wandered into an ambush of guerrillas.

The Roman Catholic church has 600,000 members in Rhodesia and runs more missions here than any other church. For years, it has been critical of the country's white government and its racial policies.

The Masumi mission has 400 pupils and is one of the oldest in the country. Before Sunday's shootings, there had been no incidents at the mission.

U.S. tells Russia of interest in Ginzburg

(c) New York Times

Washington — The State Department said Monday it had informed the Soviet Union that the United States was "watching with concern" what happens to Aleksandr L. Ginzburg, a leading political dissident, who was arrested in Moscow last week.

The Carter administration's unusual interest in Ginzburg's treatment was conveyed to Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance last Friday, administration officials said.

In that meeting, Vance also asked the Russians to cancel in 24 hours the ouster of an Associated Press correspondent, George A. Krinsky, announced that day.

Moscow refused to rescind Krinsky's expulsion, however, and the United States Saturday ordered a correspondent for the official press agency Tass to leave this country. Monday's public statement of concern on Ginzburg was delayed until Monday, in the vain hope that he would be released in the interim, officials said.

The Soviet Embassy Monday issued a statement protesting the expulsion of the Tass correspondent as "absolutely groundless" and a violation of the Helsinki agreement. The department justified the retaliation as in response to the Soviet "violation" of the Helsinki agreement in its expulsion of Krinsky.

"We are watching with concern the treatment of Aleksandr Ginzburg, and we have made the Soviet government aware of our feeling," Frederick Z. Brown, a department spokesman, volunteered Monday.

This was the third "human rights statement" issued by the State Department since the Carter administration took over.

On Jan. 26, the department charged Czechoslovakia with violating the 1975 Helsinki accord by its harassment of the signers of the human rights document, Charter 77.

Two days later, the department warned the Russians not to try to silence Andrei D. Sakharov, a leading dissident and human rights activist.

The Sakharov statement drew a Soviet complaint for interference in domestic affairs.

Two Russians launched for experiments in orbit

Moscow (AP) — The Soviet Union launched a spaceship with two men aboard Monday to continue experiments with the orbiting space station Salyut 5, the Tass news agency announced.

Tass said all systems aboard the Soyuz 24 spaceship were functioning normally and the crew, identified as the commander, Col. Viktor Gorbafko, and flight engineer Lt. Col. Yuri Glazkov, had started carrying out their flight program.

The two cosmonauts, Tass said, were feeling well.

The purpose of the launching, the agency reported, was "to continue scientific-technical studies and experiments with the orbital station Salyut 5 started on July 7th last year during the joint flight of the transport ship Soyuz 21 and the station Salyut 5."

The Soyuz 24 flight was the first Soviet manned space shot since last October when the mission of Soyuz 23, with two rookie cosmonauts aboard, was cut short because of what Tass identified only as an equipment failure in the control system.

Israel impatient

Associated Press

Israeli Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said Monday his country has only limited patience waiting for the United States to get Syria to pull back troops in Lebanon now eight miles from the Israeli border.

Allon expressed his impatience as United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim arrived in Lebanon on his Mideast tour to reactivate the Arab-Israeli peace talks in Geneva.

The top U.N. official denied any intention to compete with American efforts to get Israel and the Arab countries back to the negotiating table this spring.

"On the contrary, the United Nations is cooperating and coordinating with the cosponsors of the Geneva conference," Waldheim said on arrival from Saudi Arabia.

U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance is scheduled to make his first Middle East tour later this month to sound out chances for the Geneva conference jointly sponsored by the United States and the Soviet Union.

Waldheim said leaders of Egypt, Syria and Saudi Arabia, which he visited before going to Lebanon, "attached great importance to my current effort to get the negotiating process underway again."

Coffee's going up in Brazil, too

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil (UPI) — Brazilian coffee drinkers got the bad news Monday — the price of coffee is going up for them, too.

Camillo Calazans, president of the Brazilian Coffee Institute, said the government's coffee stocks earmarked to support the domestic price will run out in June and force an increase in prices at home.

Coal Lobby

Washington — President Carter has promised to support tough federal controls on strip mining, which leaves behind brutal scars on the land it gouges. But the coal mine operators are bringing quiet pressure on both Carter and Congress to leave strip mining alone.

Virginia coal mine operators, for example, arranged a private meeting the other day with White House energy czar James Schlesinger. They complained that it was impossible for them to restore the strip-mined land, as the pending legislation would require.

The bill would force them to give up strip mining and throw thousands out of work, they warned. Schlesinger seemed impressed. When he met later with a citizens' group, he echoed many of the operators' arguments. He was particularly worried, he said, about the economic consequences.

His visitors replied that stricter land reclamation laws have been enforced in Pennsylvania without throwing people out of work. They also had slides showing how strip mining has scarred the contours of Virginia and fouled the streams with tons of dirt.

"I guess I must have been misinformed," said Schlesinger.

Both Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford made a big noise in the White House about reducing the number of Americans on welfare. Yet a secret study shows that the totals have continued to escalate.

Health, Education and Welfare Department documents show that some three million families are receiving aid for their dependent children. Of these, an astonishing 12,000 families have literally grown up on welfare. They have been getting assistance for more than 20 years.

Millions have been spent, meanwhile, on studies to find out how to get people off welfare. The studies have been a total waste of money. The latest study, like all the others, is expected to show that welfare increased in most categories during 1975.

Russell Baker

New York — Every year the same old routine. Winter would rise from the Arctic ice, tour down through Canada, then swing east along the same old route. North Dakota, Minneapolis, Chicago, Lake Erie, Albany, Boston.

How tired of it all Winter had become. Minneapolis! He had spent so much time in Minneapolis that he was beginning to feel like Hubert Humphrey.

Winter began brooding about dying. Would it not make a great play? "Death of a Season." He fancied the idea of a two-year run in New York. He never got to stay there long enough. It was always off to Albany, then on to Boston at the usual goading memo from his mother.

"Time to close Logan Airport again for 18 hours," she was always saying. He was sick and tired of her memos. All those treacherous nature writers calling her Mother Nature had turned her head. She loved those hackneyed news stories referring to "Mother Nature's icy grip." Personally, winter hated such vulgarity of expression.

He hated, too, his mother's habit of waking him every year with her cheerful, "Rise and snow, rise and snow!" Lately, he had begun to balk. "I think I'll pass it up this year," he had said with increasing frequency. "Nonsense," his mother invariably replied. "It's time to give your old mother's icy grip a little publicity in the papers." And off she would pack him. Minneapolis, Chicago, Albany. The sample cases loaded with the same old sleet and that tired old plummeting mercury. Everybody along the route was bored with it.

Last year Winter got his back up and refused to go south of Winnipeg. There was a nasty scene back home. Afterward, Summer, who had been to college and knew where to find girls who wore practically no clothes at all, took Winter aside.

"Listen, dummy," he said in his superior college style, "why don't you get yourself a girl to see when you go on the road?"

"I'm not interested in girls," said Winter. "They've got too much fur. A moose has got better curves."

"You are going to the wrong places," said Summer. "If you go south the fur disappears and you will never look at a moose again."

In October Mother Nature was at it again. "Rise and snow, rise and snow!" she called. Winter hopped briskly off the Arctic ice, packed his things and did the Canada-Dakota-Minneapolis leg of the annual tour. "How do I get south?" he asked a furry woman. "Go to Cincinnati and then left," she said.

The next day it was 25 degrees below zero in Cincinnati and he saw neither man nor woman who was fit to look at. In fact, the way these people looked made him yearn for the sight of a moose.

He went to Buffalo. At this time of year, there was bound to be a moose in Buffalo.

He spent days roaming Buffalo. Not a moose in sight. Eventually, he met a woolly mammoth. "Where are the moose?" asked Winter. "Gone south to escape Mother Nature's icy grip," said the mammoth.

Winter said he had been south all the way to Cincinnati. Not a moose in sight. "Cincinnati's not south," said the woolly mammoth. "To get south, you've got to go to New Orleans and turn left."

The next day it was so cold on the Gulf of Mexico that the citrus groves were producing instant frozen juice, and Winter saw neither man nor woman who did not look like a freshly plucked chicken. Their blue-pimpled hides made him yearn for the sight of a woolly mammoth, so he headed for Buffalo.

He spent days roaming Buffalo. Not a woolly mammoth in sight. Eventually he met Mother Nature who had come out to see what he thought he was doing going to New Orleans and making left turns and had been marooned for a week in a snow bank.

She was furious. "Get on back to the Arctic ice and go to bed," she said. "and you're never to use the car again without my permission."

Unfortunately, however, she was not able to make herself heard, for she was already so tightly locked in her own icy grip that her larynx was suffering from tertiary frostbite. Winter, thinking that she was merely incoherent with pride at his new-found get-up-and-go, skipped off merrily toward Miami and turned left.

Natural gas 'shortage' really a profit argument

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio has asked the Interior Department to "determine whether the major natural gas producers are withholding large amounts of natural gas." Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania also sees a conspiracy behind the natural gas supply situation and has asked President Carter for "an immediate White House investigation of the true situation of the gas companies in America." He says controls are needed "if indeed, as I suspect is the case, our gas producers are following the example set by the OPEC nations in raising up the prices for phony reasons."

Metzenbaum and Shapp are from two states hit hardest by the severe winter which has dangerously pressured the capacity of much of the nation to keep warm and working. Borrowed supplies of natural gas have been diverted to those states suffering the most.

Figuratively speaking, one can suppose Shapp and Metzenbaum and the people they speak for are delirious from the cold and thus perceive a conspiracy which more comfortable Americans might ignore.

Gov. David Boren of Oklahoma, where there is enough oil and gas, says talk about a contrived natural gas shortage "has not produced a bit more gas to keep the people warm." Boren says there is a need to end "regional rhetoric" in favor of a national approach to solving the energy crisis.

And not surprisingly, a spokesman for the Natural Gas Supply Committee, a producers organization, says charges that natural gas has been artificially withheld from the market are "stale, inaccurate and irresponsible." The producers look to the Interior Department to lay to rest the conspiracy talk.

That leaves the ball in Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus' court. He said last weekend that an initial probe into gas-withholding charges will be completed some time this week and if there is any supporting evidence, a larger investigation will be launched.

Gov. Shapp and Sen. Metzenbaum better not hold their breath in anticipation of a showing that trillions of cubic feet of natural gas are being held against their will in an abandoned warehouse somewhere. The current problem is not the result of a device that crude or criminal.

The gas producers and distributors can put forth convincing arguments about why huge additional volumes of natural gas are not forthcoming from certain proved reserves, possible reserves or producing reservoirs. Some of it has to do with regulatory requirements, negotiating processes, a natural law of diminishing returns and the lack of capacity to get everything hooked up and working at once, but most of it has to do with incentive — and the industry is not hiding that fact any more than it is "hiding" gas. The industry is saying if you want more gas you will have to pay more for producing and distributing it.

The industry is saying that price decontrol will solve any existing problem. But it will not answer the toughest public policy question: how much is enough incentive? There is a lack of public faith in industry's capacity to handle that question on its own, and until industry proves to the public's satisfaction that it, too, can sacrifice, the battle over price control on essential energy forms will continue to rage.

Same goals for a new chief

One of The Star's syndicated columnists a few days ago was commenting on President Carter's losing fight with the Senate over the confirmation of Ted Sorensen as head of the CIA. The writer observed that Carter should retreat on the matter and not spoil for another fight: he should "appoint some safe admiral."

That guy was obviously on the inside. Carter apparently will appoint an admiral, an old classmate from the Naval Academy, a fellow who apparently has the confidence of the conservatives as well as some liberals who like the cut of his jib.

If this is true, and Carter's old classmate gets the nod and is confirmed by the Senate, it is hoped here that the new boss of central intelligence will remember some of the goals that Sorensen talked about pursuing.

That is: evolving criteria for covert activities which are somewhat consistent with American values, forging Maxwell Smart capers and murder on foreign leaders and forbidding domestic spying for internal political purposes.

These are goals any CIA chief should pursue, "safe admiral" or not.

A name's a name

Let's call the Devaney Sports Complex the "Devaney Sports Complex," regardless of what the Legislature says. While I realize that they may want one of their names on it, let the "Devaney Sports Complex" be the name unless they want it to be brought to the vote of the people.

Unless the people by popular vote change the name to something else, then let's continue to call it what we want to.

GRANDMA

The energy dilemma

Lincoln, Neb.

Our country for several days has been experiencing the greatest energy crisis of our time. President Nixon requested Congress to pass energy legislation. President Ford during his few months as president practically begged Congress to pass energy legislation. Congress, due to its overwhelming Democratic majority, refused, primarily due to partisan political bias.

The present energy crisis, factories closed down, schools closed and homes without heat are the direct result of Congress's not having enacted an adequate energy legislative program. The eastern states which repudiated President Ford in the recent election are now paying the penalty for lack of energy legislation. Such legislation would have provided for increased production and proper distribution.

Today's Mail

It seems to me that all of us are now paying for the luxury of harboring a huge partisan majority in Congress whose main interest is to perpetuate and increase its power rather than legislate for the benefit of our country.

A rather pitiful consolation is that the majority of voters who are responsible for the present situation are subjected to the same inconveniences as the minority who knew better but were out-voted.

One fact

Lincoln, Neb.

With all the debate and Scripture-quoting regarding the death penalty, one can believe the "expert" he chooses, or the interpretation of the Scripture he desires. The death penalty may or may not be a deterrent to murder. Society may or may not be vindictive in carrying out an execution.

One thing is certain, however, Gary Gilmore and Charles Starkweather will never kill another innocent victim.

OBSERVATION BY D

Roca, Neb.

After attending the hearing for LB 36, the proposed city-county merger, I came away with a sick feeling.

Two of our county commissioners are helping to sell us down the river, aided by the vice-president of the League of Women Voters.

Bruce Hamilton stated: "The seven per cent county populace are not represented by any official governmental body." Does that scare the other 12-822 of those in Lancaster County? Didn't we all vote for a county commissioner? Why aren't we then represented?

Mayor Boonsalis is going to appoint the Charter Commission. We won't be able to elect our voice. Fifteen of these people will represent Lincoln, six will represent Lancaster County. The county obviously never will have the majority vote on any question put before such a committee.

Those who wish to help stop LB 36 should write in opposition to Senators John DeCamp, Walter George (chairman), Herbert Luis, Martin Kahle, Bernice Labeled, JoAnn Maxey, Loran Schmitt, or Gerald Koch.

The bill is constitutionally questionable.

Let's keep whatever small voice we in the county now have from being stifled.

The whole kernel

Bennet, Neb.

It has been said that man often has to be hurt to be helped, or, in other words, things we don't like are often a blessing in disguise.

In some cities back East where the weather is severe, not only fuel but also food is in short supply. Would people go hungry or starve when grain elevators are full of wheat? Wheat is a natural food and contains all mineral and chemical elements needed for a complete diet.

God made a grain of wheat and man can't improve on it by eating the white flower and giving the rest to the hogs and cattle, with wonderful results to the livestock. Yes, if man ate the whole kernel, he would be better off both physically and financially.

NORMA BARDSEY

San Francisco — Just before Jimmy Carter took office, Leonid Brezhnev sent word that the Russians would not take any early action to test the new administration. The breathing space has proved brief, indeed.

The repressive Soviet moves of the last few days — the explosion of an American correspondent, the arrest of a leading dissident — may or may not have been intended to test Carter's resolve. But the administration had to take the actions seriously if its commitment to human rights was to remain credible. It responded clearly and firmly.

Item. A few hours after an Associated Press reporter in Moscow, George Krimsky, was ordered out on the flimsiest of grounds. Secretary of State Vance called in the Soviet ambassador, Anatoly Dobrynin, and asked for reconsideration — within 24 hours. When that was not forthcoming, Washington expelled a Tass correspondent.

Item. The arrest of Aleksandr Ginzburg, a dissident who has played a vital role in helping Soviet political prisoners and their families, was not ignored in Washington as such cases often have been. The State Department drafted a critical statement.

Item. Carter sent a personal reply to a letter from Andrei Sakharov, the most important Soviet defender of human rights.

The change of administrations has evidently made a real change in official American attitudes toward Soviet repression. The Kissinger era of public silence and asserted "private diplomacy" — which usually seemed to amount to a nod and a wink — is over.

The United States change comes at a time when the screw of repression is being turned tighter in the USSR. That is plain from a large number of incidents concerning Soviet Jews, internal dissidents and American correspondents.

Crude anti-Semitism has appeared in a number of recent Soviet attacks on "Zionism." A Soviet illustrated magazine, Ogonyok, says in its current issue that before World War II "Zionists" conspired to set up a pro-Nazi Zionist state; the paper charges that Israel kidnapped and tried Adolf Eichmann to keep him from disclosing that story.

Provocations against the dissidents have been increasing. In a recent search of Ginzburg's apartment, the police took funds intended for official victims and, Ginzburg said, planted dollars and West German marks, apparently with the aim of charging him with speculation in foreign currency.

Krimsky and other American reporters had been subjected to blatant harassment because of their determination to cover the dissidents. Tires have been slashed on cars parked in front of the police-guarded compounds where they live. One reporter's wife was threatened.

American students of Soviet affairs are uncertain whether the repressive turn represents a policy decision at the highest level or is the work of elements in the Soviet bureaucracy that are nervous about possible effects of the Helsinki Agreement. A meeting in Belgrade next June is to consider how well Helsinki is being carried out, including the provisions for greater freedom of human contacts.

Whatever the motivation, the increasingly repressive trend poses serious dangers for Soviet-American relations. Consider, for example, the possible impact on the hope for a new arms limitation agreement.

Secretary Vance is right to reject any formal "linkage" between the arms talks and the progress on human rights, because effective arms limits would in any event benefit the United States and world peace. But there is a link in political realities.

Brutal internal behavior by the Russians is bound to increase

American public skepticism about their good faith. Carter's nomination of an arms negotiator who promises to be really effective, Paul Warnke, is already under attack from political forces opposed to any imaginable lid on the arms race. Every assault on human decency — every fabricated charge against a George Krimsky or an Aleksandr Ginzburg — hurts the chances for rational arms-control efforts.

In speaking out for humanity in the Soviet Union — for at least the minimum decencies promised at Helsinki — the Carter administration is therefore acting to save the prospects of better Soviet-American relations. Soviet leaders, who say they want that improvement, surely ought to know enough about American opinion to recognize as much.

But of course there's a more basic reason to speak out: because it is right. American concern may not always save individual victims in the communist world from oppression, but sometimes it does. Anyone who has dealt personally with those brave dissidents knows of their deep conviction that they are protected from the worst by outside voices, especially American voices. We owe it to them, and to ourselves, to do whatever we effectively can.

TV's 'Roots' part fact and part fantasy

Ben Mondron

Like no document since perhaps the Emancipation Proclamation, it brought home to millions of people the fact that slavery is a very real and altogether regrettable part of this nation's heritage. It spoke to whites in black terms, and while everybody should realize that the picture is factually flawed, it is the sentiments that are important. Haley spoke of what blacks feel, of the anger pent up since the first ships embarked with the first chains around the first bodies, of the bitterness over the fact that the eventual breaking of those chains did not free the minds which remained entrapped in a strange land, bound to a foreign culture, robbed of a once vivid past.

All that is slowly changing now. Whites and blacks alike are becoming increasingly aware of the history of black Africa. Alex Haley's "Roots" is a important lesson on the subject.

Concordia board accepts Janzow's resignation

Seward (UPI) — The Concordia College Board of Control, with "deep regret" Monday accepted the resignation of college President Dr. W. Th. Janzow because of controversies within the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod which would prevent him from effectively carrying out his duties.

Janzow, who has held the presidency for 14 years and is the sixth person to head the college since it was founded in 1894, officially submitted his resignation to the board Sunday night during a 3½ hour meeting.

The board deferred final action until Monday and offered the interim presidency to Dr. Vance Hinrichs, the college's dean of business affairs. The board gave Hinrichs until Friday to act on the offer.

"I trust that a new leader will bring a new spirit, renewed strength and a restored trust to Concordia," Janzow said.

Janzow had told the college's faculty he was resigning because of controversy within the Missouri Synod, which owns and operates Concordia, has generated a "future shock" preventing him from achieving mutual trust and cooperation he felt was needed between himself, the board of control, faculty and the college's church-related community.

In a statement released Monday, the board said while it recognized Janzow's contribution to Concordia, it "concurs in his evaluation of the situation which brought about his resignation."

The controversy has arisen in the synod between so-called liberals and conservatives and the way in which each group interprets teaching and administrative policies.

A college spokesman described Janzow as a "conservative in the sense of being right of center" who "adhered to the doctrinal and scriptural position of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod."

Janzow had received support from the college's 1,500-member student body and 110-member faculty as well as groups associated with the St. John's Lutheran Church in Seward.

A petition developed by the student senate and signed by 500 students before it was submitted to the board of control urged the board to decline Janzow's resignation and "extend to him" the board's "full cooperation and support."

Dr. James Pragman, chairman of Concordia's theology division, said it was "too early" to see what ramifications Monday's action would have within the faculty.

"The whole faculty supported Dr. Janzow. The statement of support was adopted by the faculty without a dissenting vote," Pragman said, adding he didn't see any mass faculty resignations resulting from Monday's action.

"The faculty is concerned that the mission of the college continues," he said.

Since Janzow became president on Jan. 25, 1963, the college added a graduate program and a liberal arts degree instead of being exclusively a teacher training institution.

In addition, Janzow's administration saw the construction of a science building, music center, campus center and six dormitories.

Janzow said his plans for the future are indefinite.

A Lincoln man told police this weekend that someone broke into his house and stole $1,200 worth of antique clocks, jewelry and other items.

Cass County school merger put to voters today

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Voters in three Cass County school districts go to the polls today to decide whether the districts should merge.

The special election covers the Louisville, Murdock and Weeping Water districts, said Cass County School Supt. H. Neil Lancaster.

The proposal is about a year old, Lancaster said, and opponents twice have filed lawsuits against the plan.

The basic proposal being voted upon would, if approved, lead to construction of a new junior-senior high school to serve students in all three communities.

The building would be located within a two-mile radius of the intersections of Highway 1 and 50, near Manley. That is close to the center of the three districts, said Dutch Rikli, of the county planning committee that worked on the proposal.

Each community would retain an elementary school for grades kindergarten through six, he added.

The proposal also would create a new school board. The initial members of the nine-member board would be appointed, three from each community.

Rikli said that no students would be moved from their current schools until the new junior-senior high was built.

Lancaster said voters rejected a similar plan in 1968. That plan, however, also included the Elmwood school district in the merger proposal.

Louisville and Murdock voters approved the 1968 proposal, while Elmwood and Weeping Water voters rejected it, Lancaster said.

Lancaster said present school enrollment in the three districts is 444 in Louisville, 434 in Weeping Water and 224 in Murdock.

Last Friday, Cass County District Court Judge Raymond Case refused an application for an injunction seeking to block Tuesday's election.

The lawsuit, filed by Lloyd A. Thomassen of Weeping Water, challenged some of the technicalities by which the Cass County Committee for School District Reorganization forwarded the proposal to the state, then set the election.

The suit contended that proper notice of meetings was not given, that the county committee had not approved the amended proposition and that establishment of school district ward lines was not provided.

The State Committee for School District Reorganization approved the election plan Dec. 16.

Wheat alive but needs water badly

The wheat in Lancaster County is still alive but it needs rain desperately, according to Don Miller, county agricultural agent chairman.

Miller and other Lancaster agents inspected eight fields in the past week to determine the condition of the wheat crop.

"It is still alive. The root development is poorer than we like to see and there is little evidence of fall tillering. The crown and roots are in good health so far," he said.

Miller said the lack of tillering would mean there will be fewer stalks of grain growing in the fields this spring, indicating that yields have been reduced somewhat.

"We need rain. There just isn't any surface moisture or you couldn't dig in the soil. You can dig below the roots because there hasn't been enough moisture so the ground would freeze," he said.

"It remains to be seen what will happen with the crop. It is very dry but with good rain there still could be a pretty good crop. I have seen a lot of wheat that is worse," he said.

OPPD declines 1977 rate boost

Associated Press
Omaha Directors of the Omaha Public Power District voted 4-0 Monday against raising electricity rates.
Chairman Rosemary Skrupa said OPPD's new chief investment counsel, E. F. Hutton Co., said it is not necessary to boost rates now.
"We will defer the rate increase as long as possible," she said. But other directors said they probably would vote for a 4% boost for 1978.
The directors had under consideration a rate increase schedule that would have amounted to nearly 17% over three years, with a 5.6% increase scheduled for this year.

The raise next year, directors said, would be mainly for construction of a coal-powered station at Nebraska City.
Also involved is the estimated $40 million in cancellation costs for a second Fort Calhoun nuclear unit, though district managers have said some of the amount may be recoverable.

Last week, by cancelling two of its biggest contracts, OPPD in effect pulled out of a joint venture with the Nebraska Public Power District to build a $1.2 billion second nuclear plant at Fort Calhoun.

The investment firm of Piper, Jaffray and Hopwood Inc. was designated adviser to the district's refunding plan under consideration for some 1975 revenue bonds.

Directors took the advice of the new counsel to renegotiate for lower interest rates, a $170 million bond issue which would have financed certain construction.

The directors, after postponing a number of items on Monday's agenda, heard from their legislative committee.
The voted to oppose:

- Any legislation granting rate setting authority to any agency other than the district's board of directors. Metropolitan Utilities District directors also have voted to oppose legislation giving the Public Service Commission such authority.
- Legislation restricting district policies on shut-offs, payments and bill collection.
- Any legislation creating any additional governmental authority over plant sites or construction.

- Directors voted to take no position on:
- Legislation requiring an OPPD MUD merger unless the bill adversely affects the district's rate payers. MUD directors also oppose such legislation.
 - Any legislation requiring the separation of wholesale from retail power supply operations.
 - Any nuclear moratorium legislation written without further consultation with the directors.
 - LB339, the "Utility Customers Act," which requires voter approval of any contracts of more than $50,000.

Northern Natural Gas Co. reports record revenues, earnings, assets

Omaha (AP) — Northern Natural Gas Co. Monday announced record revenues, earnings and total assets for 1976.
The company reported earnings of $6.30 per share in 1976, up 9% over the $5.80 per share in 1975.
Northern said 1976 revenues were $1.38 billion, compared with $1.16 billion in 1975, up 19%. Net income of $143 million in 1976 was 9% above the $131 million earned in 1975.
W. A. Strauss, chief executive officer and chairman of the board of directors, said that all operations other than petrochemical contributed to the improved earnings.
He said the results also reflect the investment of $235 million in Northern's various businesses last year.

Increased wheat tax needed to maintain global programs

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor
Doubling the Nebraska wheat tax would help make it possible for two wheat promotion agencies to open offices in Malaysia and in Africa to increase the world market for U.S. wheat, a Nebraska agricultural official predicted Monday.
Nebraska wheat farmers contribute to Western Wheat Associates, which promotes wheat in the Far East, and Great Plains Wheat, which promotes the sale of wheat in Europe, Africa and South America. Both organizations are financed by wheat checkoff programs in the major wheat growing states. The tax in Nebraska, now at quarter cent a bushel, has helped pay for wheat research and promotion around the world for the past 22 years, according to John Lee, chief of the Wheat Division, Nebraska Department of Agriculture.

Lee told members of the Nebraska Agribusiness Club that extra money would be needed soon because inflation in other countries exceeds that of the United States.
"The cost of just maintaining present programs is increasing about 10% a year. We have to pay $1,000 a month for a four-room apartment for our wheat man in Japan now," he said.

Lee described wheat promotion programs that include bakery schools in foreign countries, mass feeding programs for children and efforts to teach women throughout the world about wheat foods.
"We have done a fine job in Japan, but there is still the whole African continent that uses very little wheat and more than 300 million people in several smaller Asian countries who are just beginning to learn about wheat," he said.
Present wheat supplies are growing faster than demand, Lee said. "We are shifting emphasis from research toward marketing. We need to learn more about how wheat is marketed around the world and to develop direct sales techniques."

Lee said there has to be a continuous development of new wheat varieties in order to stay ahead of disease and insect problems.
He also called for research into special wheat for making noodles. "We know a lot about making good bread from wheat but we are using bread wheats for the noodle market. We need to know more about the quality of wheat needed for noodles."
Lee said the proposed increase in the wheat tax from a quarter to a half cent would raise about $200,000 in Nebraska for use in promotion programs.

Rural Development Conference is think-tank experience

Two Nebraskans attending the ninth National Rural Development Conference which began Feb. 6 in Boulder, Colo., indicated they felt the program would be useful in planning projects when they return.
The week-long program features lectures and group work sessions solving problems for hypothetical towns and counties.
"I wish I had gone to one of these sessions three years ago when I first got on the Otoe County Planning Commission," said Edward Rowen Jr. of Nebraska City.

"The most important thing I have learned here is that you don't jump in to solve a problem. Analyze it first," Rowen said.
"Communication is the biggest problem in zoning, for example. A lot of people come to planning meetings very unhappy because they have some bad information. They need the facts," Rowen said.

Sally Ann Webster of Lincoln works for the state Office of Planning and Programming as a regional planner for 26 counties in south and central Nebraska.
In a telephone interview from Boulder, she described the meeting as "a real good one."
"About a quarter of the people here are elected officials with the rest local people who paid their own way. They are interested in the program and are eager to work to get her to plan for problems," she said.

Ms. Webster said the group used hypothetical towns and counties as examples and then worked out plans to solve the problems in group discussion.

UNL takes high honors at Texas livestock show

Fl. Worth, Tex. — The University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Varsity Livestock Judging Team captured first place in quarter horse judging en route to a fifth place overall finish. The inter-collegiate contest is held in conjunction with the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show.
The 18-team event was won by Texas A&M University, followed by Oklahoma State University.
Nebraska's highest overall finisher among the 90 participants was Dwayne Nelson, a junior animal science major from Newman Grove, who had 902 points. Roger Bissell of Kearney was UNL's second place overall scorer with 880 points, who was followed by Scott Japp of Washington. Steve Pritchard of Spalding and Greg Ford of Cody. All are junior animal science majors on UNL's five-member team.
Ford and Pritchard finished 12th and 13th, respectively, leading UNL to the top trophy in quarter horse judging. The Nebraskans also finished third in hog judging, led by Pritchard's second place finish and Japp's fifth place showing; 10th in sheep judging and 11th in beef judging.
Earlier in the week, UNL's Meats Judging Team placed eighth in the 10-team Southwestern Intercollegiate Meat Judging Contest in Dallas, won by Oklahoma State University.

TRADED NATIONALLY OVER-THE-COUNTER

Execution ban is advanced

Associated Press

The Unicameral's Judiciary Committee voted 6-2 Monday to advance to the floor Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers' legislation to abolish the death penalty in Nebraska.

At least two committee members indicated that they voted for advancement even though they opposed or were uncertain of their stance on the legislation when it reaches the floor.

Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett, committee chairman, said he opposed it but added that he felt new senators should have a chance to discuss and debate the bill.

Fremont Sen. Barry Reutzel said he was uncertain how he would vote on the floor, but said it should go there.

Joining Barnett, Chambers and Reutzel in voting for advancement were Hemingford Sen. Sam Cullan, Omaha Sen.

Pat Venditte, and Avoca Sen. Cal Carstens. Voting "no" were Scottsbluff Sen. William Nichol and Omaha Sen. Larry Stoney.

"The issue has been made especially pertinent by the recent decisions of the state Supreme Court, Chambers told the committee before the vote.

Chambers said that if the bill was not advanced, he would offer a floor amendment to the criminal code, which cleared the judiciary committee.

The bill, LB64, had an extensive public hearing earlier, drawing proponents and opponents to give classic pro and con arguments ranging from the deterrence factor of the penalty to various religious beliefs.

Some committee members indicated they would be interested in seeing a floor amendment to LB64 that would fix a flat minimum sentence in capital crimes in lieu of the death penalty.

Cullan brought it up and Chambers said that, although he wouldn't offer such a change, he wouldn't be adverse to such a move. Venditte expressed interest in such a change.

"I think at least a minimum sentence should be served in lieu of" execution, he said.

At the earlier hearing, Venditte had brought up the fact that the average prison stay for a person serving life imprisonment is 14 years under the current parole system.

Chambers' reference to recent Supreme Court action concerned the high court's upholding of the death penalty's constitutionality.

In other action, the panel voted 6-1 to kill Adams Sen. George Burrows' LB70, which would have banned the use of hollow point bullets in Nebraska, including their use by police.

Chambers also argued on behalf of LB70, saying such bullets can kill when other types would wound. Barnett said the issue is one that should be decided in the case of police use by local officials.

The committee also took testimony on three bills Monday, including Kearney Sen. Martin Kahle's LB292 to end some judicial discretion in post-conviction proceedings involving juvenile felons.

Spokesmen for the Youth Development Center at Kearney said the bill could weed out some hard-core offenders creating problems at the unsecured facility in Kearney.

However, opponents noted that juvenile felons are subject to homosexual rape attacks in prison and were wary of such a change despite pre-conviction hearing opportunities to divert cases against juveniles accused of felonies to juvenile court.

Sen. Ernest Chambers
LB64 sponsor

Barnett urged Kahle to work toward finding or funding an intermediate penal facility in Nebraska for such juvenile felons.

Legislature delays tax decision

The Legislature undertook its first debate on taxation Monday, but after lengthy discussion decided to postpone a first-round decision on the question for 10 days.

Lawmakers bracketed until Feb. 17 Milligan Sen. Richard Marsh's LB29. It would allow small communities, through petition, to tax property another one-half mill to maintain a community building such as a former school.

The 49 senators divided almost evenly on the issue, as Sens. Don Dworak of Columbus and John DeCamp of Neligh led opposition to it. Both argued that property taxes are already high and that voters do not want another entity established to allow them to go higher.

"Every year we find some way to enact other taxes without a vote of the people," DeCamp said, and added that property taxes in his district were already "out of hand" and confiscatory.

Dworak said there were over 30 ways for local taxing agencies to add to property tax and said he was opposed to establishing "yet another taxing district on the local level," and said the bill was "not in the best interest of the people of Nebraska."

DeCamp moved to kill the bill, but that action failed on a 22-23 vote.

Displaced homemakers, handicapped bills go on

By Dick Holman
Star Staff Writer

Nebraska voters' decision to help handicapped children was moved Monday out of the Education Committee to the Unicameral floor in the first step toward becoming law.

With two members absent, the vote to advance was unanimous on LB443, a committee bill implementing terms of a constitutional amendment Nebraskans approved last November.

The panel also voted 5-0, with one senator passing, to toss into the legislative chamber LB389, Lincoln Sen. JoAnn Maxey's proposed Nebraska Equal Opportunity for Displaced Homemakers Act.

Actions on both bills came immediately after public hearings Monday. No one appeared to oppose either one.

LB443 would allow the state or any government unit (such as public schools) to contract with nonpublic institutions to serve handicapped children's educational and other needs up to age 21. The services must be nonsectarian.

The bill now must go through three legislative approval stages and get the governor's signature. It would go into effect 90 days after Unicameral adjournment.

Support for LB443 came in testimony from the Nebraska Catholic Conference, Sertoma Hearing Project, parents of handicapped children and organizations dedicated to them.

Nebraska State School Boards Association and Papillion Public Schools representatives unsuccessfully asked the committee to delay acting on LB443 until it considered LB470. That bill would require State Board of Education OK of local school boards' contracts and deny non-public services to the handicapped when they're available from public agencies.

Concern was also expressed that the services or state money might in effect cross state lines in some districts.

Mrs. Maxey's bill would establish, under the state education commissioner, two centers to serve displaced homemakers — middle-aged women who are suddenly divorced, widowed or otherwise subjected to loss of family income.

LB389 maintains that because such women lack paid work experience, they face unemployment because of age and discrimination, and have limited access to financial aid from Social Security, unemployment compensation, Medicaid and other insurance benefits or pension plans of the spouse.

"Their status is officially ignored," Mrs. Maxey told the committee. "LB389 will be the bootstrap" for displaced homemakers to pull themselves up by and to restore their esteem. She said laws on the books are "only helpful to employable women."

Mrs. Maxey's bill would focus on identification and outreach, including job counseling, placement services, training and referral services, for women who "served without pay the best years of their lives" but are forced to earn a living.

Cost for two pilot service centers — one in Omaha and another in a county with population between 40,000 and 300,000 — was estimated unofficially at $93,860 in 1977-78, all state funds. Federal funds would be available thereafter, Mrs. Maxey said.

Idle Fund investment bill called 'fantasyland' idea

United Press International

A bill with the objective of diverting more of the state's idle cash to Nebraska banks was described by state investment officer Donald J. Mathes Monday as an "ivory tower" approach to help ease the loan money squeeze.

Testifying before the Legislature's Banking, Commerce and Insurance Committee on LB258, Mathes said ideas proposed by two University of Nebraska faculty members were an exercise in "fantasyland."

"The problem with ivory tower theories is that none of them work," he said.

Dr. Wayne Dobson, NU professor of banking, and one of his graduate students, Roger Rutz, had argued that increasing the amount of idle money invested in certificates of deposit with state banks would produce a double benefit.

Interest yields would be greater and the economies of areas where banks loaned the money would be stimulated significantly, thus expanding the tax base, they said.

Between July 1973 and June 1976, according to Rutz, the state lost several million dollars because it did not deposit as much money as was available. Several million dollars more would have been generated for state coffers if banks could have loaned the money to commercial, agricultural and industrial interests, he said.

Sen. Loran Schmitt, Bellwood, sponsor of the legislation, said under arrangements made on a voluntary basis, idle money in sums of $100,000 has been deposited in 362 banks.

This pumped capital into communities that otherwise would not have had that credit source, he said.

Approximately $36 million in surplus is so invested currently, but Rutz believes much more — perhaps up to a total of $100 million — might be available.

Mathes said it is impossible to build a wall around Nebraska "because money flows into and out of the state like anything else."

He said the Nebraska Investment Council believes a maximum of $50 to $60 million in surplus money could be loaned out and the present law should not be tampered with. But if the committee approves LB258 it should be revised, he said.

He proposed an amendment banning investment of trust funds and any monies available for investment for a period insufficient to permit deposit in time deposit open accounts.

The bill had the support of the Nebraska Bankers Association.

Robert Harris, association executive manager, said its members believe the state is "sacrificing valuable dollars by allowing its idle funds to be invested away from Nebraska."

He said Nebraska banks must pay a competitive rate for state funds if the money is to be invested at home and any legislated formula on the rate to be paid must offer strong assurance the funds would be loaned to satisfy the state's strong demand for credit.

If the first two requirements are met, Harris said, it is unfair to Nebraskans to be denied use of these funds through investment elsewhere.

He noted LB258 would require banks to pay one per cent above the average rate paid for 90-day U. S. Treasury bills and that the $100,000 initially offered to each bank would be fully insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Any additional funds a bank received would require government securities pledged to assure their safety, he said.

Harris said another Mathes amendment proposing banks bid competitively on all short-term state funds would see the majority of the money going to a few institutions. Under Schmitt's bill, disbursement would be across the state, creating loanable funds statewide, he argued.

The committee did not act on the bill.

New review system is popular

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

The Unicameral Monday stamped strong initial approval on a proposal to institute continual legislative review of the performance of state agencies.

The bill, LB193, introduced by Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica and cosigned by Sen. Neil Simon of Omaha, bounded across its first floor hurdle on a 33-2 vote.

Sens. Cal Carsten of Avoca and Donald Dworak of Columbus dissented.

Bereuter's proposal calls for performance review of state agencies by the legislative fiscal office.

The analysis will include "program effectiveness" with special emphasis on the accomplishment of program objectives.

Bereuter envisions a performance review of seven or eight state agencies each year.

The system would replace performance auditing in the state auditor's office, a function which was not financed by the 1976 Legislature in anticipation of transferring the duties to the fiscal office.

"Performance review belongs in the legislative branch," Bereuter said.

"This is the only way to get proper legislative oversight," Speaker Roland Luedtke of Lincoln agreed.

"This should be a legislative function... to see if the executive branch is doing its job. And now is the time to get at it."

Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings, who headed the Appropriations Committee for 16 years, also threw his weight behind the bill.

"It's worth a trial. It's worth putting your chips on this," Marvel declared.

The state auditor's office has requested $90,000 for performance audits during fiscal 1977-78, Bereuter said, but his proposal should be less expensive.

Bereuter guessed that no more than two additional analysts would be needed for implementation of his program.

The auditor's office would continue financial auditing of state agencies to determine whether their funds have been "spent honestly and correctly," the senator noted.

LB193 would give the Legislature a new tool to help measure the effectiveness of state programs it finances through the appropriations process, Bereuter said.

Performance review reports by the fiscal staff would be transmitted to a special legislative committee consisting of all members of the Appropriations Committee, the speaker, the chairman of the Legislative Council's executive board and the chairman of the standing committee concerned with the operation of the specific agency under review.

School-aid revision measure held

By Dick Holman
Star Staff Writer

Part of political success is timing, the Legislature's Education Committee members agreed Monday, in delaying action on the state school-aid revision bill.

"I think the governor's like nothing better than for us to come out first" moving LB33 to the Unicameral floor before Gov. J. James Exon delivers his budget message on Thursday, said freshman Kearney Sen. Martin Kahle.

Committee chairman Frank Lewis of Bellevue said during the executive session that it would be "ill conceived" to advance the request with its $20 million increase before Exon expresses his spending wishes.

Lewis advised seeing the "tone" of the governor's proposals first, to avoid stubbing senatorial toes should LB33 deviate significantly from what Exon would accept.

The governor has vetoed a string of state school-aid boosts. But he indicated he's more receptive to a revision this year if senators make corresponding spending cuts elsewhere.

After Exon lays out his ideas, Lewis said, the panel "might include some of his judgments" in LB33, introduced by Ralston Sen. Gerald Koch and cosponsored by Lincoln Sen. Shirley Marsh.

Koch said the "present formula (for equalizing the amount of dollars to school districts with varying property values) is obsolete." Lewis said LB33 is the best "compromise" legislation yet that is workable and can satisfy the most people.

The state's share of support to public schools from sales and income taxes would increase from the current $55 million by $20 million annually until Nebraska pays for 40% of the schools' operations. The local share would continue to come from property taxes.

The Education Committee did advance two bills:

—LB379, sponsored by Kearney Sen. Ron Cope, to establish at Kearney State College the Nebraska Safety Center and an advisory council. The vote was unanimous.

—LB205, Avoca Sen. Cal Carsten's bill to authorize the State Board of Education to irrigate and improve State-owned school lands under its jurisdiction. The vote was 7-1. Kahle objected that a 10% manager's fee is excessive.

Accountability boards workers named

Associated Press

The Unicameral chose a half dozen people Monday to work on two separate areas of government accountability in Nebraska.

State senators confirmed the three non-legislative persons recommended for appointment to the Unicameral's Conflict of Interests Committee.

The legislators also named three from among their ranks to work with Speaker Roland Luedtke of Lincoln and Hastings Sen. Richard Marvel, executive board chairman, on compiling nominations for the political accountability board called for in the "Sunshine Act."

Named were Dr. Richard D. Nesmith, pastor of Trinity United Methodist Church in Lincoln; Clayton H. Schmitt, an Omaha attorney who resides in Ralston, and George P.

Miller, publisher of the Papillion newspaper and vice president of the Nebraska Press Association.

Senators chose a trio of their colleagues in district caucuses to work on Sunshine law accountability board nominations.

Named were Utica Sen. Douglas Bereuter from the 1st Congressional District; Omaha Sen. Tom Fitzgerald from the 2nd District, and Grand Island Sen. Ralph Kelly from the 3rd District.

That trio along with Luedtke and Marvel make two lists of nominations for submission to Gov. J. James Exon and he later makes the appointments.

The governor chooses one from each list of private citizens to represent the public on the board.

Enrollment record set

Omaha (UPI) — Creighton University Monday announced a record spring semester enrollment of 4,667 students. Registrar Jack Williams said, however, the university showed a 2.71% or 130 student decline from the fall semester of last year to the current spring semester. He said the record all-university spring enrollment was a 3.41% increase over the same period last year.

Thermograms taken

Omaha (AP) — Heat escaping from Omaha-area houses was captured on film this weekend by a company hired by Metropolitan Utilities District and Peoples Natural Gas Co. A twin-engine airplane with infrared scanning equipment flew across the metropolitan Omaha area Friday and Saturday nights. It took thermogram "photographs" of houses and businesses in Omaha, Bellevue, Papillion, LaVista, Ralston and Council Bluffs. The photos will indicate how much, if any, heat is being lost from buildings because of inadequate insulation and other causes.

Tavern robbed

day were seeking to determine if there were possible connections between three recent Grand Island area robberies involving suspects wearing ski masks. Police said two men wearing ski masks and armed with a pistol and a shotgun forced their way into a Grand Island tavern Sunday night after confronting the owner as he was carrying garbage out the rear door. Police said an undetermined amount of money was taken, but the owner escaped injury. Ski masks were also worn by robbers holding up a gas station-grocery store and another service station recently in Grand Island.

Thone attacks rebate

Washington (UPI) — Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., said Monday that President Jimmy Carter's proposed $50 rebate to most adult Americans would neither improve the economy nor create many new jobs. Thone said the U.S. Treasury already is deeply in debt, but would have to borrow another $11.4 billion to issue the $50 rebates. He believes the U.S. economy needs encouragement from the private sector plus education and training programs to provide more employment.

Talks will continue

Sioux City, Iowa (AP) — Negotiations between Local 222 of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen Union and Iowa Beef Processors of Dakota City will continue Tuesday in Washington, D.C. Union members voted Sunday night for a day-by-day extension of the existing working agreement. The vote carried by a narrow 55-45% as nearly 2,000 union members met at the Morningside College campus.

Escapes

In answer to a question about such a deal, County Atty. Ron Lahners said no deal had ever been made to drop charges on the first escape. Charges on the second escape have not been filed because Van Ackeren is being held in Douglas County jail and he hasn't been served with a warrant on that offense, the Lancaster County attorney's office reported.

Van Ackeren made a tape recording of his story for prison officials. A prison psychologist who listened to the tape and knows Van Ackeren is reported by a prison source to have said he thought Van Ackeren was telling the truth.

The psychologist, Kenneth Liggett, refused to comment to The Star about the tape, claiming a patient-doctor relationship.

Letters that Van Ackeren wrote to his former wife between September 1976 and January 1977 referred to contacts with the patrol and the FBI.

Mrs. Van Ackeren, who now lives in Forks, Wash., said Monday Van Ackeren asked her to destroy some of the letters because he was afraid for his life.

"He seemed to think that he either had to make a deal to get out or that someone would set him up from inside the pen," she said.

In a letter dated Nov. 30, Van Ackeren wrote that he had not heard from the patrol recently. "So maybe they will come through as promised."

He said that a patrol officer told him not to worry about an extension to his sentence which might result from the first escape attempt.

Beatrice housing development OKd

By Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Beatrice — In various phases of discussion for several weeks, a 75-lot housing development for east Beatrice got official city council blessing Monday night as its final plat was approved.

Approximately half of Jamestown Square, lying east of 26th St. and north of U.S. 136, will be residential. The rest of the 40-acre tract is intended for commercial development.

The developer, Jim Clark of Omaha, has indicated his firm will build dwellings on half the lots to be eligible for Farmers Home Administration loans. It is anticipated the rest will be utilized by other contractors for higher-priced homes.

The council had previously turned down a request to de-annex the area to permit its development as a sanitary improvement district (SID). Under conventional development, the area has been received enthusiastically by the council and other city officials.

As part of the procedure setting the wheels in motion, both a water main district and sewer district to serve the area won't quick council approval.

On another matter, Mayor Bob Sargent expressed hope that the council and county board will "not have a change of heart" toward the Gage County Industrial Park if it passes to private ownership as anticipated. Each group had given $150,000 in revenue sharing funds to develop the site before the Nebraska Supreme Court ruled such expenditures illegal.

Sargent noted that an attempt will be made, possibly starting this week, to sell $410,000 in bonds so the tax money can be returned to the two government entities.

Presumably, some private groups would then take over the site for further industrial development.

Sargent suggested that the tax money could still be given for such a project, although statutes preclude government ownership.

The rejection of a beer license for Godfather's Pizza by the State Liquor Commission prompted a decision to look into the matter further. The council had routinely approved the license at the same time as two other businesses which the commission had sanctioned. "Up in Lincoln they're trying to restrict liquor licenses and the liquor commission isn't paying any attention," complained councilman Bill Johnson, noting that the Beatrice situation is just the reverse.

The council also:

- approved appointment of Richard Smith of Omaha, a recent graduate of Creighton Law School, as city attorney.
- referred four bids to Board of Public Works on paving districts 284, 285 and 286 and curb and gutter district 94. Apparently low bidder was $115,059 by National Construction Company.
- deferred action on a request for funds for community Fourth of July celebrations.
- approved one and six-year street plans as submitted by Public Works.
- approved Retail Council's request to designate week of March 6 as Energy Conservation Week.
- designated Jaycees to be in charge of community improvement programs.
- approved Retail liquor licenses for Lorene Anne Frerichs of "The Office", Norma L. Martin of "Warehouse Liquors" and Homer E. Kessler of Elk's Lodge.
- approved renewal of maintenance agreement with State Department of Roads.
- accepted resignation of Dr. David Gleason from Civil Service Commission and appointed Larry J. Frederick as replacement.

Chadron suit challenges 3 council members

Chadron (UPI) — A Chadron businessman, acting as his own attorney, Monday filed a Dawes County District Court suit challenging the right of three of the city's five council members to remain in office.

Milton Grantham alleged Ronald Busch, James Schaffer and Mary Horse were unlawfully seated because a Chadron city ordinance and a 1917 state statute prohibit public employees from holding council posts in a city manager-council form of government.

Grantham was part of an unsuccessful petition drive to unseat Deputy Mayor Horse and Schaffer and prevent Bush, who was re-elected in November, from being sworn in again.

Busch is employed in the administrative offices at Chadron State College, while Schaffer is a social science professor there. Mrs. Horse is a first grade teacher in the Chadron Public Schools.

Comprehensive Plan still attention grabber

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

The Comprehensive Plan continues to elbow other issues from the limelight. Monday it grabbed the spotlight again when Lincoln City Council action on three proposed shopping centers was delayed by Lancaster District Court Judge Dale Fahrbruch. Fahrbruch's ruling came in response to a request by developer Newt Coppel, who argued that improper procedures were followed in adoption of the Comprehensive Plan. The City Council was expected to vote on three shopping center zoning proposals at these sites: 40th Street and Old Cheney Road, 56th Street and Old Cheney Road, and 27th Street and Pine Lake Road.

The first site, promoted by Coppel, was removed from the Comprehensive plan. The last two sites are included in the plan.

In granting the request for the delay, Fahrbruch cited an allegation by Coppel's attorney, Arlen Beam, that Councilman Steve Cook had a conflict of interest in developing the Comprehensive Plan.

Cook and insurance executive John O'Neill are the developers of the center at 27th Street and Pine Lake Road.

Cook withdrew from votes and discussion of the shopping centers during formulation of the Comprehensive Plan, but participated in developing other portions. He also voted to approve the plan in total.

Coppel claimed, among other things, that Cook should not have participated in discussion on the transportation section of the plan, since he (Cook) has a monetary interest in roads that pass real estate in which he has a monetary interest.

In his ruling, Fahrbruch did not cite another allegation by Coppel that the Lancaster County Board of Commissioners had violated state law by meeting in a closed session without following procedures set forth in state law.

Coppel was apparently referring to the fact that three members of the board went into a separate room during a recess in final adoption of the plan. After they returned, the board voted to follow the City Council's lead and approve the two sites now listed in the plan.

A hearing on Coppel's request for a temporary injunction is set for next Monday. It will be before Lancaster District Court Judge William Blue, who was out of town Monday.

In the meantime, the council's work on other matters has been disrupted because, on the advice of City Atty. Charles Humble, the council is not taking action on zoning requests in which the new Comprehensive Plan may be an issue.

Three such requests were delayed Monday. With the three zoning requests for the shopping centers, six items were postponed.

On other zoning matters, residents near the Colonial Golf Course along East O Street continued to object to a proposal to replace the course with a three-story apartment for the elderly.

A proposal to tear down existing buildings to create a parking lot at the southwest corner of Holdrege Street and Idylwild Drive met with similar objections from nearby residents.

The City-County Planning Commission earlier recommended denial of the apartment for the elderly and approval of the parking lot.

Elaine Hammer
... appointed planner.

E. Hammer is planner

The Lincoln City Council Monday unanimously approved the appointment of Elaine Hammer to the City-County Planning Commission.

She will replace George Williamson, former chairman of the commission, who resigned in accordance with an agreement with Mayor Helen Boosalis that he would do so after completion of the City-County Comprehensive Plan.

Mrs. Hammer, of 5000 N. 7th St. is a longtime member of the League of Women Voters and a member of the Goals and Policies Committee. Her term on the commission runs until August, 1981.

Isaac Stern packs recital hall

By Richard Grace

The artistry of Isaac Stern marked a red-letter day in the brief history of Kunball Hall on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus. Performing in a capacity filled hall the famed violinist provided an enthusiastic audience with a complete musical evening.

It is difficult to assess what makes a musician stand head and shoulders above other professionals of his kind. At this point one takes for granted that such things as technique and intonation (which concern many amateurs) are well in control. Therefore, the person who distinguishes the music from mere pitches and rhythms with all other things equal is indeed a rare person, and Stern easily qualifies in this category. He puts the audience at ease with his natural confidence and ability and then proceeds to charm the listener with his musicality.

The program of music was well diversified in a variety of composers and musical periods from Bach to Enesco. Stern opened the recital with the delightful G minor Sonata by Schubert. Published after the death of the composer, the melodious work was a marvelous vehicle of expression for the likes of an Isaac Stern. The Sonata No. 3 in A minor by Georges Enesco set an entirely different musical tone. The 20th century Romanian composer employs strong Near Eastern scales and harmonies of his native country despite a musical education in both Vienna and Paris.

A third sonata composed by Debussy was brilliantly played by Stern and was well received by the audience. The highlight of the evening was a change in the program from Stravinsky to Bach.

Honoring a request Stern flawlessly played the Adagio and Fugue from Bach's Unaccompanied Sonata No. 1. The performance of this work was truly something to behold.

Stern completed the program with Adagio in E major and Rondo in C major by Mozart and the popular Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso by Saint-Saens. For an encore, Stern chose two dances from Romeo and Juliet by Prokofiev.

Stern's accompanist was Alexander Zakin who has accompanied him for more than 30 years. There can be little doubt that Zakin is well aware of every nuance that Stern might chance use. But it appears that some of the magic has gone from Zakin's fingers and in many passages where the piano should dominate and sparkle, there was little or nothing that happened. Nevertheless, the two do make wonderful music together.

F. J. Hogan new director of OPPD

Associated Press

Gov. J. James Exon Monday announced the appointment of Frank J. Hogan of Omaha to the Omaha Public Power District board of directors.

Hogan will finish the unexpired term of Ray Matson, who resigned from the OPPD board last week after the board decided to pull out of its agreement to participate in the Ft. Calhoun No. 2 nuclear power plant.

Exon said in a news conference that Hogan is a retired senior vice-president of Mutual of Omaha. He was suggested for the post by one of the governor's aides and was chosen for his "sound business judgment," Exon said.

Exon said he wanted to appoint someone with "no preconceived notions" on OPPD board policy, especially since the board split on participation in the Ft. Calhoun nuclear plant.

Exon also announced the appointment of North Platte attorney Earl Morgan to the 13th Judicial District judgeship.

Liquor license hearing set

The City Council Monday decided to apply the Oklahoma land grab technique to liquor licenses.

On Feb. 22, the council decided, it will hold an "informal" hearing for everyone who plans to submit a request for a liquor license in the near future.

Before that time prospective applicants are urged to turn in a written description of what type of business they hope to run.

The City Council recently agreed to grant two additional Class C (everything including mixed drinks and package sales) and two Class A (beer on-sale) licenses each year for the next two years.

The action came after a council-appointed citizen panel had recommended increases of five licenses in each category for the next two years.

The council decided to raise the limit after the State Liquor Commission began granting liquor license requests over the city quota.

In other action the council:

—approved application of Skylane Tavern at 3200 Adams for a Class C liquor license and application of Joseph E. Guiliano as manager.
—delayed action one week on Long John Silver's application for beer on-sale only at 6821 O St. and application of Donald K. Soderberg as manager.
—delayed action one week on Dominic's application for beer on-sale only at 819 O St. with Donald J.

Arena as manager.

—approved request for special permit 221 A to create additional parking at the southeast corner of 17th and K.
—delayed action one week on application of Brier West, Inc. to expand existing special permit 643 A at 27th and Old Cheney Rd.

—approved construction of the following districts: repaving 127, ornamental lighting 214, sewer district 1032, water district 1018, sidewalk district 62.
—approved extension of completion dates for sidewalks in Lincolnshire Estates 1st and 3rd Adds.

Meeting will probe burning trash for fuel

Beginning sometime in March city officials plan to hold public meetings on a proposal to burn Lincoln's garbage as an energy source.

A report by the Ralph Parsons consulting firm last year found that burning the garbage to generate electricity or create steam heat was economically feasible.

Little has been done since then, however, as officials delayed action to learn if the Nebraska Public Power District would burn trash for fuel.

Participating in the meetings will be the City Public Works, Lincoln Electric System, neighborhood group representatives, the Lincoln Alliance and anyone interested, according to acting Public Works Director Dick Erixson.

PTA legislative workshop will focus on local, national issues

Current issues concerning children and youth will be explored at the 21st annual legislative workshop sponsored by the Nebraska Congress of Parents and Teachers (PTA) Thursday at the Lincoln Holiday Inn Northeast.

PTA officials said the morning sessions will feature small group discussions covering state aid to education, juvenile legislation, school reorganization and health education. Morning sessions begin at 9:30.

Juvenile Court Judge William Nuernberger will speak on "The Juvenile Court and the Concept of Family Court" at a noon luncheon. Afternoon sessions will include tips for being effective in the legislative arena and a review of state and national PTA issues.

Dinner will feature Vietnamese food

A public dinner featuring Vietnamese food will be held Friday at Christ United Methodist Church, 46th and A Sts.

Don Luce, co-director of Clergy and Laity Concerned, will speak. The dinner will be served between 6 and 7 p.m. Reservations must be made by Wednesday.

Parents are first, most important teachers

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

Parents are a child's first, and most significant, teachers.

That's the philosophy behind a new program being taught at the Southeast Community College Child Care Center in Lincoln.

Dubbed "Parents Are Teachers," the program is a first for Nebraska, according to instructor Kathy Perry. It was developed with federal funds in a St. Cloud, Minn., preschool and has been adapted to the college quarter system at SCC.

"This is a unique approach in teaching parents about their children since it brings both parent and child into the classroom setting," Ms. Perry said. But the real teaching is designed to happen at home.

According to the Minnesota program, a child's capacity to learn is mainly developed in the pre-school years. The home environment and parental involvement are significant in this.

Parents and their 4-year-olds are introduced to the program through a six-week orientation session during which they learn how to use a series of self-instruction kits, aimed at teaching one of several subject areas.

For instance, the reality of air is taught by having the youngster blow through a straw, first onto himself, then into a glass of water.

"The resultant bubbles allow the child to see air," Ms. Perry explained.

Each kit has six projects, designed to be used a day at a time.

"By the sixth day the child is blowing up a balloon and placing it in the ice box, to see how air contracts," she added.

Auditory and visual concepts, motor activity, classification (big and little, colors, etc.) and body concepts (who and what am I?) are also taught.

After one activity kit is used up, the family exchanges it for another at the regular class meeting.

Once a month the sessions are expanded to include films and guest speakers. Upon completion of orientation, parents and children spend one hour each week at the center, discussing things of interest to both.

The results of the Minnesota project have been astounding, Ms. Perry said. Almost 100% of the parents said they developed a better learning environment at home. In addition, 96% said they felt more confident as their child's teacher, and 99% felt more effective as parents.

Lincoln parents are "enthusiastic" about the program, Ms. Perry said. "Working parents have found it is time well spent with their children," she added.

Only 10 families are involved this quarter, she said, "but we expect to have more next quarter."

As the program builds up momentum, Ms. Perry predicts that several sessions will have to be held each quarter.

Olympia neighbors don't argue with cannon of Fellows family

Olympia, Wash. (AP) — His neighbors acknowledge that Dean Fellows is the "Big gun" on the block. But when Fellows and his son, Scott, fire their homemade Napoleonic cannon, dishes rattle, windows quiver and neighbors wonder if the block has met its Waterloo.

Fellows, a retired Army artilleryman, and his son have built a four-fifths scale cannon, big and loud enough so the neighbors will be happy when it's sold.

"Once when we fired it at night, a neighbor threatened to call the police," Fellows said. "We're more careful now."

The muzzle-loader will hurl a golf ball about 1,200 yards, or a 20-ounce lead ball about 700 yards.

To fire the cannon, four tablespoons of black gun powder are packed in a sandwich bag and pushed down the barrel. Rags are wadded in and then the projectile, if desired. Powder is stuffed into the flash hole and then ignited.

It took 18 months for the two to build the cannon from a solid piece of metal that once was part of an aircraft carrier's drive shaft. The wheels and framework are made of oak. Fellows is asking $6,000.

Aggressive play peps Lietzke

Honolulu (UPI) — Strategy plays an important part in golf and Bruce Lietzke's decision to stick to his plan to "play aggressively" has made him a household name in four short weeks.

The lanky 25-year-old Texan headed for the Bob Hope Desert Classic Monday with a $48,000 check safely put away. He earned the hefty prize money a day earlier by winning the $240,000 Hawaiian Open.

Lietzke, who earlier this year won the Tucson Open and has already pocketed $100,500 in earnings in 1977, said his tournament philosophy was simple — and that was to attack the par-5 holes at the flat and wide 7,234-yard Waialae Country Club course.

It worked. Over the four-day span, Lietzke was 15 under par for the par 5s with three eagles, nine birdies and four pars. As it turned out, that was the total number of strokes he was under par with his 273.

Two eagles came on the first day and he saved the last for the 72nd hole — and a television audience that encompassed the north American continent and the Orient.

With a one-stroke lead over Don January, with whom he shared the third-round lead, and Japan's Takashi Murakami, Lietzke could have played it safe by going for a par on the 18th. However, he stuck to his original plan and when he got the opportunity to go for an eagle, he went for it — and got it.

"I thought of it for a while," he said afterward about the possibility of playing it safe. "But I was attacking the par 5s the entire tournament and I had been playing aggressively the whole tournament — make that the whole year — so I decided to go for the green, to give it a try."

Nothing more need be said as he rolled in a 10-footer to wrap up the tournament with a three-stroke victory over January and Murakami.

Lietzke's rounds here of 67-70-67-69 extended his string to 15 consecutive rounds of par-or-better golf on the winter phase of the PGA tour.

"That shows I have adapted my game to each of the different golf courses," he said of his accomplishment.

He wasn't quite sure he was going to sustain the streak after completing the first nine holes Sunday.

"After being even par through nine," he said, "I thought the Hawaiian open wasn't in my grasp. I was thinking of a second or third place finish."

At that point, January and Lanny Wadkins held a stroke edge over Lietzke. But Wadkins ran into a horrendous back nine, 41, and January saw his hopes of winning buried in the sand at the 17th where he carded a double-bogey five to put Lietzke in the lead.

While mulling over his Hawaiian open success, Lietzke added, "If somebody said that I would make over $100,000 in the first five weeks of the tour, I'd say he had too many mai tais. There's no way to visualize making that much in the first few weeks."

Then he added, "Gosh, I had to change some goals after Tucson. But now, I'll have to go home and think about this."

'Snails' are anything but slowpokes

Daytona Beach, Fla. (UPI) — With a name translating into "team of snails," you would have thought Hurley Haywood, John Graves and Dave Helmick might still be slugging their way around the Daytona International Speedway.

But it was just a wry little appellation they used when entering the 24 Hours of Daytona road race. They joked about it after winning the endurance contest Sunday.

Helmick, of Stroudsburg, Pa., said the entrant name "Ecurie Escargot" was something he had used in the army and, translated from the French, means stable or team of snails.

At the beginning of the race, it might have sounded more appropriate because most folks thought one of the three powerful turbo Porsche 935s or perhaps one of two French Inaltera prototypes might win the contest.

But a couple of smashups and some mechanical failures later and the Porsche Carrera driven by Haywood, Graves and Helmick was out front.

They took the lead just before the 21st hour mark and kept it for the $16,900 first prize money, covering 2,615 miles with an average speed of 108 miles per hour.

Lake Placid funds eyed

Washington (AP) — President Jimmy Carter's administration is reviewing proposals for $32 million in appropriations to speed construction of the 1980 Winter Olympics site at Lake Placid, N.Y.

A spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget said Monday that Thomas B. Lance, the head of OMB, will probably have a decision within a day or two.

Most of the money for the Olympic facilities has already been approved by Congress. But before it can be spent, a Senate appropriations subcommittee must approve a transfer of the cash from other accounts.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., the subcommittee chairman, delayed action on the plan Monday because he said he wanted assurances first from the administration that it would support special supplemental appropriations to replace the money that is being shunted to the Olympic project.

"We're all for Olympics," said an appropriations subcommittee aide. "But we want to make sure that the committee doesn't get accused of being for an add-on cost that the administration opposes."

The Olympics money includes $30.2 million for sports facilities and $22 million to build a 500-bed federal prison at Ray Brook, N.Y., near Lake Placid, that would be used temporarily to house the athletes at the Winter Games. The total cost of the 1980 Games is expected to be $116 million, including funds from New York State and as yet unappropriated federal money.

Federal officials and New York's two U.S. Senators, Republican Jacob K. Javits and Democrat Daniel P. Moynihan, appealed to Hollings' Monday for prompt action on freeing the money that has already been appropriated.

They said construction could begin in April with rapid approval of the expenditures. The officials said that because of the cold, snowy weather that is common to Lake Placid there is not that much time to get everything ready for 1980.

Aeros players to skip paycheck?

Houston (AP) — The World Hockey Association's Houston Aeros may ask their players to give up one or more paychecks to help the team meet rising expenses, Coach and General Manager Bill Dineen said Monday.

"There's no question we have a problem," Dineen said. "We feel the whole thing right now is to get through the season. We're down to a short period of time now.

"It would be a shame with the young hockey players we have not to be able to hold on here. We hope that it can be a deferment (in salary) that can be repaid if we get things back on even keel."

Despite being one of the winningest teams in the WHA (30-17-5, first in the West Division) and its' defending champion, Houston's attendance has dropped from an average of 8,553 last year to 8,038 this season. The Aeros must average 11,000 to break even.

Harrison Vickers, the team's general counsel, said the Aeros are in a process of trying to increase sales and cut costs "like any other business in the United States. We are discussing everything from the number of clubs we own on up to the amount of playoff bonuses that we pay.

"Obviously the players are a significant part of the cost of our doing business and, if there is a way to accentuate some savings there with their cooperation, then we are exploring that."

The Aeros' average salary is $75,000, compared to the WHA average of $85,000.

Chester

Cary Tietjen ... top scorer

Tietjen, returned from a 13-9 club.

"He's doing a good job," Schleifer said of Williams' first year as head coach. "He's got good rapport with the kids, has a lot of enthusiasm, and works hard."

That fits with Schleifer's contention that "you win games on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays, not on Fridays and Saturdays."

Tietjen said the differences in the Chester-Hubbell program from last year to this year are minimal. "There isn't really that much difference. Practices are about the same."

That may be because the Chester-Hubbell game plan is about the same as it has been for 30 years — a patient perimeter offense that waits for the high percentage shot.

"We run the same zone offense," Williams said, "and the same man-to-man shuffle."

As in Tietjen's case, individual roles have necessarily changed. As a sophomore, he rarely shot. This year, Tietjen supports a 20-point average. He said, "of course I have to shoot more."

One of the few noticeable changes is on the sidelines where a few of Williams' idioms such as a friendly "jerk, minor jerk, and super jerk" have worked their way into the team's vocabulary as good natured references to almost anybody.

Williams doesn't feel the need for change. He considers Schleifer a master coach. "He taught me practically everything I know about the game. I owe him. I owe him a lot."

Williams no longer frets about how well he is filling Schleifer's shoes. "Before the season started, he conceded, "I worried about it — the pressure of it. I finally made up my mind just to give it my best shot."

As Schleifer's assistant for a year and head coach at neighboring Byron the previous two years, Williams was well-acquainted with Schleifer's exploits as the Bulldogs' basketball coach.

But Schleifer has helped make the transition smooth. He even missed his first Chester game in 31 years in January when he chose to take his wife Gladys and their two sons to a University of Nebraska game in Lincoln. Ironically, the game he missed was with Nelson, the team that ended his coaching career in the district semifinals the year before.

Chester coaching may not be entirely out of the Schleifer household, anyway. One of Williams' most ardent boosters is Evonne Freitag, a Lincoln secretary and Byron native who rarely misses a Chester-Hubbell home game. And she's Gladys Schleifer's cousin.

2 Indiana teenagers arraigned in holdup

Ogallala (UPI) — Two Indiana teenagers were arraigned Monday on robbery charges for the armed holdup of an I-80 service station after which a third suspect was shot and killed by a Keith County Sheriff's deputy at the start of a high speed chase.

The two 15-year-olds from Highland, Ind., were transported from the Perkins County jail to Keith County where they appeared before Associate County Judge Robert Scott in Ogallala.

Scott set a $10,000 bond for one of the suspects who was apprehended by Deputy Rick Carr before the high speed chase started near Grant late Saturday and $15,000 for the other who was the alleged driver of the car.

The owner of the car, James E. Spence Jr., 23, also of Highland, was shot and killed by a shotgun blast fired by Carr as Spence and the 15-year-old driver attempted to flee from a county road intersection in the vehicle, which crashed into a ditch four miles west of the shooting scene.

Keith County Sheriff Eldon Webb said it had been determined a .22-caliber magnum pistol used by Spence in the Saturday robbery of Al Perlinger's service station near Paxton was "shoplifted" by Spence earlier from a Fremont store.

Webb said the two 15-year-olds could be freed if they posted 10% of their bonds.

However, Webb said telephone conversations with their parents in Indiana indicated the youths "won't be bonded out until their preliminary hearing, if at all."

Scott set a preliminary hearing for Feb. 14.

Webb said David Schroeder, an Ogallala attorney, was asked by the prosecution to represent the youth in court Monday to insure protection of their constitutional rights.

"We don't know who will defend them right now," Webb said. "The question of their financial status is uncertain at this point."

A coroner's inquest held at Grant Sunday absolved Carr from any wrongdoing in the Spence shooting. Authorities have said $140 was taken during the robbery.

Authorities said the three Hoosiers left Indiana late Thursday night with an original destination of California. However, investigation showed some indication they might have been in the process of turning back.

Perkins County Attorney Donn Rojeski, who handled the initial investigation, said the two 15-year-olds "started out as runaways for sure."

New nursing head for Union College

Union College will get a specialist with new ideas for its future Health-Education Complex.

Harold F. Googe, associate chairman of the Loma Linda University Department of Health Education, Loma Linda, Calif., will direct Union's nursing program later this year, announced Dean Hubbard, Union College academic dean.

"We will be greatly strengthening our nursing program and moving into a baccalaureate program in health education," said Hubbard.

The Seventh Day Adventist college plans to build a new health-education complex on the S. 48th St. campus which should be opened during 1978, Hubbard said.

Googe, 42, earned his R.N. license from Hinsdale Hospital, Hinsdale, Ill., and a B.S. from Andrews University, Berrien Springs, Mich. He also has earned advanced degrees including a doctorate in health science from Loma Linda University.

Googe recently has worked for the West German government helping to develop rural health programs for Pakistan and Burma. He will continue in similar work for Malaysia and New Guinea before coming to Union College this summer.

The plan for Pakistan calls for developing a health education center, followed by health guard centers in 40 villages. Pakistanis would be trained to work in the health centers and they, in turn, would train other village people as health aides, Googe said.

More serious medical problems would be handled by a medical team which would visit each center once weekly. The plan is to provide health care and health education for Pakistanis by Pakistanis.

"The age of the Great White Father is fading," Googe said.

Wishing Well

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 4 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 4, add 4. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers. Left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
